

Counselling and support for people affected by the Disability Royal Commission

Our services offer support without judgement or discrimination in a safe and supportive environment.

We are here to provide free and independent counselling and support for you, your family and carers.

Funded by the Australian Government Department of Social Services

Are you living with a disability?

Relationships Australia TAS is funded to provide counselling and support to people living with disability, who have been affected by the Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect, and Exploitation of People with Disability.

Their partners, families, carers, and support workers can also access this free and confidential service.

We can provide free counselling in the following ways:

Face to Face

Online

Over the Phone

All of our centres are wheelchair accessible and most sites have onsite parking. All centres are also close to public transport.

If you are unable to come into one of our centres for this service please contact us and we can arrange to meet at a suitable venue.
